INJURED IN WRECK

Continued from Page one.

Edwards, of Darlington, S. C. was also reported slightly injured.

The train was made up of engine, tender, combination baggage and mail car and two passenger coaches. The forward coach and the passenger coach were derailed by the accident, but the mail car and engine held the track and passed over without derailing. The rear coach went down out injury. The rear coach went down out injury. The rear coach went down out injury.

The embankment on the other side of the trestle and the 35 passengers on board were thrown violently to the side of the car lowly. The greatest injury to any one of them consisted mainly of bruises and cuts by flying glass. Engineer G. C. Jones was at the throttle of the train and applied his emergency brakes at the earliest moment. As soon as the passengers had collected themselves they began to extricate one another and all were soon out of the debris. Mail Agent Herman Meredith, of Wilmington, was in charge of the mail car and occupied without injury, but all on the train were more or less shaken up.

The damage to the track and trestle were slight. The damage to the equipment was principally to the front end of the coach, which was smashed up to some extent. With the exception of that one, the wrecking train sent out from Wilmington soon had the train in order again and at 10:30 o'clock it proceeded on to its destination. Immediately on receipt of the information of the wreck in Wilmington a relief train was made up in charge of Superintendent Phenagor, of the Wilmington District, with Dr. Bulluck and Fred J. Thomas on board to give temporary attention to the injured. Dr. Edwards, of Darlington, was aboard the train and did what was possible for the sufferers with the limited equipment at hand until the arrival of the relief train. The wrecking train from Wilmington followed and traffic was resumed about 1:30 o'clock. The train from Columbia did not leave at 1:45 as was not delayed, it had to wait for connections a short while at Florence, anyway.

The relief train brought the injured who cared to come, back to Wilmington and they were given treatment at Dr. Bulluck's office in the Southern building. The traveling men went to their rooms at The Orion, which they had left only a short while previous and others were sent to their homes in carriages. Mr. Staffings, of Columbia, was perhaps worst injured. He had a number of cuts and bruises about the face, but was able to get for his home on the afternoon train yesterday. Mr. Catlett, of this city, was on his way to Artesia to pay off some hands at the settlement of the Carolina Trucking Development Company at the time of the accident and was thrown violently from a reclining position in the coach. He had a bad cut over the eye and his shoulder was giving him much trouble last night. Some of the large tendons were torn loose and there is probably a slight dislocation. Conductor Jones was perhaps next worst injured. He was in the side of the coach at the time and suffered a number of painful bruises and cuts.

A large crowd gathered at the depot upon the arrival of the wreck train, all sorts of distorted reports of the accident had reached the city. The hospital ambulance was in waiting for one of the more seriously injured, but it was hardly necessary for any of the passengers to go there. Many of the Wilmington passengers were confined to their homes during the day, but it is believed that all will be able to get out in a day or two.
